POLIO, INFLUENZA, MEASLES, TYPHOID, DIPHTHERIA, TB, EBOLA, ETC.
'ALL' DECLINED TO 'ZERO' DEATHS 'BEFORE' ANY VACCINES!

Measles vaccine was introduced in 1963, after Measles deaths had already declined

No widespread vaccination program for Typhoid but the disease still declined

Influenza vaccine was introduced in 1960, Pneumonia vaccine was introduced in 2001, after deaths from both diseases had already declined

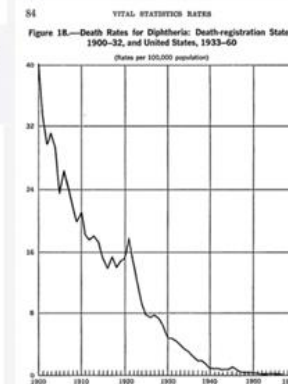

BCG (TB vaccine) was introduced in 1953, after TB had already declined

The Polio Death Rate was Decreasing on its Own Before the Vaccine was Introduced

From 1921 to 1953, before the Salk killed-virus vaccine was introduced, the polio death rate in the United States and England had already declined on its own by 47 percent and 55 percent, respectively. Source: International Mortality Statistics (1981) by Michael Alderson.

Diphtheria vaccine was created in the 1920s but not widespread until 1949, well after Diphtheria had already declined
